

Important Notice to Homeowners: Dehumidifier Recall Safety Check

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) has announced recalls of 5.6 million dehumidifiers made by overseas manufacturers Gree® and Midea® and sold under many popular retail brand names.

Hundreds of units manufactured by Gree have reportedly caught fire and resulted in a reported $19 million in property damage. Units manufactured by Midea have resulted in a reported $4.8 million in property damage.

If you have a dehumidifier purchased between January 2005 and August 2013, it is imperative that you take these precautionary steps!

1. Locate the Model Number On Your Unit

This will typically be found on the back, side or front of the unit on a name plate sticker.

2. Check the Manufacturers' Websites

You May Be Eligible For a Refund

Follow the return and refund process. If your unit is part of any recall you will be prompted to enter your contact information. You will be sent a return kit with next steps for returning your unit and receiving a refund.

A list of affected brands was obtained from the manufacturers' websites as of January 26, 2017, and follows for your convenience. Please visit the appropriate manufacturer's website for more up-to-date information.

Note: Check both lists! If your brand appears on both lists, be sure to check both manufacturer's websites.
